How to write a resume

Your resume is the key component to the hiring process and is what your employers will look at as a first impression. It is important to ensure your resume is clear and concise, with no spelling errors.

Consider including the following:

- A good introduction - a great way to get your employer's attention and stand out amongst other applicants is to include a brief resume summary of usually 1-5 sentences at the beginning.
- Name and contact details - your email, home address, and mobile number.
- Education - include all previous study you have undertaken, including your secondary and tertiary education and the relevant years you studied for.
- Work experience - include all past employments including position title, company, dates of employment, and a brief summary of your responsibilities in the workplace. Include any charities you may have volunteered for.
- Hobbies and interests - employers like to see what kind of person you are outside of work. Make sure to include what you like to do in your spare time.
- References - It is a good idea to include a reference either from previous employment, education or a personal referee.

How to write a cover letter

Cover letters are an important tool in the application process. A cover letter shows a hiring manager important information such as your interest, communication and suitability.

- Research - Your first step should be to research the company you are applying for, taking note of key aspects and the general tone in which the company carries themselves with. This will help you shape the tone of your letter.
- Tailor to the role - refer to the job description for the requirements and skills and highlight how you can bring these to the table.
- Future focus - Your resume is a reflection of your past experience, so your cover letter should reflect what you wish your future to look like.
- Watch the tone - make sure you are enthusiastic, but not too flattering. Hiring managers look for cover letters with an authentic, energetic tone.
- Keep it short and sweet - Don't add too much to the letter. One paragraph should be enough. Do not go over a half page.
